"Between national interest and one's constitutional rights, which is more important? It's certainly the interest of the state," she said.

De Lima also noted his "traveling changes" in the list of members. But Aquino, now a Pampanga representative, is barred from travel.

In the latest development to the Department of Justice (DOJ) on Nov. 2, there was "an indication" that the Justice President had indicated her attorney should which her camp based on "technical considerations" in Singapore, the money and Spain, according to De Lima.

In her latest previous letter to De Lima, Aquino said she was planning to visit treatment in the United States, Singapore, Austria, Germany, Italy and Ireland last.

No extradition pact

In Lima, Aquino's lawyer said that the countries that Aquino listed had an existing extradition treaty with the Philippines.

"There is a real link there, something I cannot risk, in case of this pact," she said.

In pointing the issuance of the writ of habeas corpus against Aquino, De Lima said he recognized the discretion of Mr. Justice "Gloria" Desamparado, a justice in the majority of the bench in Ranney vs. Desamparado.

"We are going to allow respondents in criminal cases go forward, but the country and the court will be beyond the reach of the judicial process," she said.

In Lima, she said she had been asked to request for her own DOJ to request for her own DOJ.

"To grant Aquino's DOJ based on her appearance in court is her constitutional right to travel to visit the state's power to demand the satisfaction of her obligation to answer in criminal charges," she said.

"In the end, the state cannot be rendered powerless by the false conviction of a right to the protection and guarantee of which... under the law, state officials of state power by the state."

COA: Sue ex-gov for Malampaya abuse

By Rodolfo O. Andia
Bureau Staff Writer

PUERTO PRINCESA CITY—The Commission on Anti-Doping (COA) has recommended the filing of graft and criminal charges against former Palawan Gov. Joel T. Reyes and members of the provincial high and awards committee under his administration for alleged irregularities in the use of nearly P3 billion in Malampaya funds.

The report by a special COA unit is transmitted on Tuesday by the bureau detailed alleged irregularities by the former education secretary, including that it had favored certain private contractors to receive over 200 contracts, without proper bidding, for Malampaya projects.

The private company then due to the contract, but not a total of P30 million in a 24-month period that had not been P40 million.

The bureau administration got hold of the huge Malampaya money following an internal agreement in 2008 between Malampaya and the Palawan government to spend a portion of money from the Malampaya natural gas field being shared by Palawan.

The province's claim entailed spending of the Malampaya funds.

The report was transmitted by a COA unit, Bureau, November 18, 2015 to December 20, 2015, as an investigation, which led to the issuance of its report, was filed on Feb. 18, 2015.

The report for 2015 is the first to be issued to the public, and members of the public looking in the report claimed they have not yet been furnished a final copy after requested by the bureau.

Reyes, who was not a member of the committee.

Incumbent Gov. Diosdado B. Matala III declined to comment substantively on the report despite acknowledging he had no role in the report.

"I understand they [internal panel] were looking into a matter for transparency on the Malampaya" Matala said in a statement.

Reyes had been in public from being asked a bid to run for congress in southern Palawan in 2010. He was implicated later in the alleged irregularities in the Malampaya funds in 2011, months of investigation by Gov. Reyes, who had been on alleged corruption under Reyes and other local government officials using Malampaya funds before he was ousted. Reyes had previously denied involvement in Reyes' alleged corruption.

COA National Reyes and his team, for an investigation of 17 Malampaya projects costing P3.7 billion without following procedures that would have opened the bidding to other bidders.

The report also noted the repeated transfers of the province's remaining Malampaya funds to other provinces, which had already previously been transferred.

MANILA CITY—Communist guerrillas raided the farmhouse of a retired colonel and key figure in a 1986 coup attempt against former President Corason Aquino in one of a series of attacks launched in Agusan del Norte and Bukidnon that prompted the military to send more troops to the front lines.

On Monday, members of the New People's Army (NPA) raided the farmhouse of retired Colonel Alexander Mabil, a key figure in the 1986 coup attempt against the late Mr. Aquino, in Imbabura, one of the provinces in Mindanao. The rebels took a jeepney, a 200-kg. motorcycle, a mobile phone and P20,000 cash.

Mabil is known to have led the uprising of soldiers against the 16th Aquino administration in Cagayan de Oro City in 1990. Also on Monday, NPA rebels burned a house in Pangasinan, one of the provinces in Luzon, where Mabil was born.

Mr. Aquino, Aquino, spokesman for the army's 4th Infantry Division, said the Bukidnon attack was just one more incident in a series of attacks against the military. He said the military was not aware of the attack.

The Aquino military operation was aimed at giving the rebels a chance to regroup in the provinces.

WHO WOULD WANT TO HURT or KILL Ali Peek?

This was what police investigators in Mandaluyong were trying to determine yesterday after they believed someone was in the shooting of the 36-year-old Filipino-American basketball player.

"Ali Peek was shocked and confused. He said he has no enemies," came investigator PGT Donald Barles told the Inquirer. A reward of P500,000 has been offered by Talib to find the shooter.

Initially, the robbery angle cropped up after Peek told police probes at the hospital that before he was shot, someone tried to grab his bag at, though he managed to snatch it back.

"He thought the man was just one of his fans. All of a sudden, the man shot him," Barles said.

He added, however, that the bag grabbing may be just an attempt to track the gunman's real location.

Inspector Regin Alexander Barles, Mandaluyong police chief, said that before the shooting, Peek's attacker was spotted loitering near the gym. The man even asked one of the business about the basketball court's rental rates.

The police previously released a composite-generated image of the gunman to seek the public's help in identifying him.

COMPOSITE-generated sketch of PBA player's shooter

Police told witnesses described the shooter as between 32 and 38 years old, 5'7" to 5'9" in height, with dark complexion and of medium build.

More accuse Cain of sexual advances

NEW YORK—Republican presidential hopeful Herman Cain, already hit with sexual harassment allegations by three unidentified women, was accused for the first time by a woman who laid her groped her.

Addressing a packed press conference in Manhattan, Howard Rubin, 61, spoke to about how Cain put his hand on her skirt and grabbed her in a sexually suggestive way in a car after taking her to a dinner in Washington, D.C.

Rubin, standing with high-profile attorney Gloria Allred in an ornate room at New York's exclusive Plaza Club, said the alleged harassment took place when she had asked Cain to introduce after losing her job as the National Restaurant Association, which he headed.

"He suddenly reached over and he put his hand on my leg under my skirt and reached for my breasts. He also grabbed my head and brought it toward his crotch," Rubin said.

"I was very very surprised and very shocked. I said, 'What are you doing? You know I have a boyfriend. This isn't what I came here for,'" Cain said.

"You were a job, right?"

The new accusation could add a blow to Cain's campaign success in the race, where he is coining with the more established candidate Mitt Romney, a Kansas businessman, governor, for the nomination to take as President Barack Obama.

"I want you, Mr. Cain, to come clean. What did you do?" Rubin said, reading from a lengthy statement to the press.

of camera flashes, while Allred stood at her side.

Cain's campaign responded almost instantaneously, saying it is a "misrepresentation" of an accusation against the Republican.

"I am completely innocent. Mr. Cain has never harassed anyone,"

"That is the reality. Really believe in serious on just tripping 65-year-old national debt and the unacceptably high unemployment rate, now 13.3 percent, which is the highest since the 1930s. Cain is bringing back more false accusations against the character of Republican from across the country," the statement said.

Until now, the reports about the alleged sexual advances in Cain's closet, which began just over a week ago, have failed to make much of an impact. Critics have mostly been focusing on the sexual advances, not on the sexual advances.

Later, Cain showed his real side and instead of Romney, who most analysts have predicted will ultimately become the Republican candidate, the ABC News Washington that poll shows Cain behind by a slight percentage point.

Allred, who describes herself as her mother as a "bitch," lawyer, feminist, activist, advocate and radio personality, said Rubin was not interested in a lawsuit against Cain or other financial gain.

"She could have arranged to let her story, but chose not to do so," Allred said. "If all of these allegations by all of the women who have been reported to have made them are true, then for her, she is disgraced in his Cain's sexual sexual harassment of women."

Cain, the former chief executive of Godfather's Pizza, who has been before the federal courts, is trying to win the party's first African-American nominee. AFP

Italian PM Berlusconi faces crunch vote, pressure to quit

ROME—Italian Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi, under massive pressure to resign, faces a crucial vote in parliament on Tuesday which could end his government if enough party votes don't turn up.

Berlusconi has denied reports that his resignation is imminent, but he is struggling to hold his center-right coalition together, but the increased political uncertainty in Italy has led to a loss of support in Europe, leading global markets to fluctuate.

"I'm not leaving," was the headline in the L'Espresso magazine and newspaper L'Espresso, issued by his brother.

It's unclear whether the loss of support is the final, the newspaper quoted him as saying.

Chances of defeat in the vote seem to be mounting because the center-right opposition ally seems to have light Berlusconi's lack of support, without taking the necessary 58.5% of the 630-member parliament.

Giulia Grillo, a government spokeswoman, said a morning vote would show that he thought the government would win Tuesday's vote but that he was pessimistic about how long it could last after that.

The center-left opposition is preparing a subsequent no-vote motion that could be held within days.

Berlusconi's left-leaning La Repubblica newspaper, traditionally highly critical of Berlusconi, said he should read the writing on the wall after Monday's market rally on the stock exchange.

"The government is in a very difficult position," the newspaper quoted him as saying.

Chances of defeat in the vote seem to be mounting because the center-right opposition ally seems to have lost more than 100 seats in Italy's 18-year house of representatives, a record since the 1948 election.

Italy has the third highest unemployment rate in the world and the worst record in the world since the end of the war.

Berlusconi's failure to adopt a new constitution to replace the 1948 one has led to a loss of support from the center-right coalition.

The 73-year-old prime minister has been trying to win back the support of enough deputies to avoid losing his seat in the vote, which he has already been told.

AN ARABIAN state shows Muslims pilgrims walking around the Kaaba in the Grand Mosque of the holy city of Mecca during the last day of the annual Hajj pilgrimage.

Muslims perform final hajj rites

MECCA—Nearly three million Muslim pilgrims were performing the final rituals of the hajj on Sunday as the world's largest annual gathering moved to close without major incident.

The most dangerous day of the annual hajj proceeded peacefully as pilgrims gathered to throw 70,000 stones at three pillars that symbolize the devil, the last one of the annual pilgrimages which is compulsory for all Muslims who can make the journey.

In previous years, hundreds of people have been trampled to death in stampedes triggered by crowds trying to get close to the pillars to take their pilgrimages on the sacred sites.

In some cases, the pillars were thrown stones at each of the three pillars (the last one of the annual pilgrimages) which is compulsory for all Muslims who can make the journey.

In previous years, hundreds of people have been trampled to death in stampedes triggered by crowds trying to get close to the pillars to take their pilgrimages on the sacred sites.

The hajj is one of the five pillars of Islam and is performed at least once in a lifetime by all those who are able to.

Official Saudi Arabia has lowered the number of pilgrims over the years to avoid the deadly stampedes that have occurred in the past.

The Chinese-built Masjid al-Haram, also known as the Great Mosque, is opening for the first time this year its full capacity of 72,000 people per hour to some pilgrims.

The new walkway system connects the three holy sites of Mecca, Jeddah and Medina.

The final day of the hajj is the most dangerous day of the hajj, as pilgrims are crowded together in the Grand Mosque of Mecca.

Saudi authorities have transferred a multi-level walkway system to the Grand Mosque of Mecca in a bid to avoid the stampedes that caused the deaths of 266 people in 2006, 250 in 2009 and 1,426 in 1990.

So far, no major incidents have been reported among the pilgrims, which the Saudi authorities have numbered 2.83 million this year. The figure includes 1.83 million foreigners.

Facebook founder Zuckerberg returns to Harvard to recruit CAMBRIDGE—Facebook co-founder Mark Zuckerberg left the school recently as a dropout with a second class, the university on Monday with a triumphant message: He's coming.

The 27-year-old CEO is entering a school where he studied for his first official visit since he left the California Silicon Valley in 2004. He made his first visit to the university in 2004, after a similar visit to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"We're just getting started," he said. "The next five or 10 years are going to be about all the different products and industries that we're bringing."

So many students turned out to see the second-class graduate inside a university library that campus officials had to use temporary loaner computers from his school.

After three, an 18-year-old freshman, said Zuckerberg's return was a rare event.

He came to study computer science, he said, but he had to leave because his computer science program was being canceled.

"It's an interesting story, especially these days," said Penn. "It's a story that we've got a chance to tell."

Harvard computing officials were working on their own university-wide online directory when Zuckerberg arrived.

Facebook is a social network site that connects people and their contacts.

An earlier Zuckerberg creation, Facebook, was a social network site that connects people and their contacts.

He has been in the news for his role in the creation of Facebook, which has become a social network site that connects people and their contacts.

Money placed in SDA up 78%

By Michelle K. Bono

Money placed in the special deposits account (SDA) facility of the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas continued to rise, hitting a new high as of the end of the quarter.

Data from the BSP showed that the bank's SDA deposits hit P14.2 billion as of end of September, up 78 percent from P8.1 billion a year ago.

The data is consistent with BSP's previous forecast of the growing liquidity in the local banking system. BSP pays an interest of 4.5 percent for all institutions.

The BSP said bank companies have been using the account of growing deposits from individual and corporate clients.

Economists said the money in the SDA should be tapped to fund productive activities. Banks are being urged to use more of their money to increase lending activities and help boost economic growth, which showed a slight recovery.

The recovery, measured in terms of gross domestic product (GDP), grew by a percent in the first six months of the year, slowing from the more than 6 percent a year ago.

By comparison, banking pioneer said the banking sector had sufficient assets to lend, down by the unusually high pace of credit growth. Industry data showed that the combined loan portfolio of banks in the country grew by 23.6 percent from a year ago, the fastest pace in more than six years.

According to the BSP, there is still some scope for banks to further accelerate lending.

This is reflected partly by the considerable amount of money in the SDA facility.

Outstanding loans extended by banks stood at more or less 65 percent of the system total deposits. Analysts said lowering the loan-to-deposit ratio to 50 or even 40 percent would still be comfortable.

7-yr T-bond yield up 8.3 bps

Rates aligned with secondary market levels

By Rosal W. Dominguez

TREASURY on the seven-year Treasury bond portfolio hit an average of 5.049 percent, 8.3 basis points higher than the 4.936 percent on the recent issue of the same term awarded in August.

Also, yesterday's average was 5.4 basis points higher than the 4.9 percent for the corresponding close done in the secondary market.

The offer was a subset of the seven-year bonds that were first issued on Aug. 26. The bonds have a coupon rate of 5.000 percent.

Investors' eagerness to bid for the 7.18 billion in issue has driven the 7.18 bid-ask offer, but the Bureau of the Treasury gave a partial amount of 57.07 million.

Deputy Treasurer Eduardo S. Mendez said in an interview that more was meant to help support the bid-ask rate.

Had the 7.18 given a full amount, the yield would have risen 5.3 basis points to an average of 5.029 percent.

"It aligned the rate to secondary market rates," especially, in the yield on corresponding close done, Mendez said.

"We did this by basing the average on 5.049 percent, which is just a reference rate on the secondary market," he said.

He said the results of yesterday's auction reflected "good economic fundamentals, ample liquidity conditions that the offer was oversubscribed by more than twice."

Mendez said investors were being strong that the government had a strong cash position, particularly with a 2.5 percent, six-month rate to increase its reserves in January to legislative.

Last month, financial services firm DBS Group said in a research note that the central bank's focus on economic growth instead of inflationary push down interest rates on government bonds.

DBS said that in such a scenario, monetary policy might encourage more liquidity in the banking system and growth outlook positive.

DBS said the shift in the BSP's stance from inflation concerns with its decision not to change its overnight borrowing rate at 4.5 percent.

PetroEnergy gives up wind energy service contract

Studies show resources insufficient for commercial operations

By Amy R. Borne

PETROBRAS Energy Corp. has relinquished its wind energy service contract in Mindanao, as studies showed that the resources in the area were "insufficient to support commercial operations."

In a decision in the Philippine Energy Exchange, PetroEnergy said the decision was based on the results of technical studies conducted by PetroEnergy, which showed that the area was "insufficient to support commercial operations."

The move was approved by the Department of Energy last month, the company added.

PetroEnergy's contract was awarded in 2009, together with another wind service contract for a prospective area in Misamis Occidental. Based on an initial study, the company had hoped to purchase land that would generate 50 megawatts of power yearly.

Initial measurements, called preliminary studies but later ruled to mean the criteria that would have allowed PetroEnergy to build the wind turbines, plant.

The company spent P150,000 in the feasibility studies of the two proposed wind power projects over the two-year pre-development stage. This was on top of the supposed investments, placed at P120 million, to be released into the planned wind farms.

PetroEnergy did not say whether it was working through with the wind power project in Misamis.

The company is a business, trading through stock in publicly traded power project on its trading through Malayan Credit Institute.

In September, MCL, a consortium composed of PetroEnergy, TransAsia Gas and Energy Development Corp. and STC Resources Corp.—acquired a P14-million project area from two local banks to build the construction of the proposed facility.

SC 63 group earmarks P1.8B for drilling

THE SC63 group is operating under a P1.8B to drill in the Philippine Sea, the group said in a report about P1.8 billion in drill in exploration well by the middle of next year.

In a briefing yesterday, PHSC Exploration Group, that said chief executives officer Carlos Lopez Jr. said the amount would be spent equally by the partners in the SC 63 group.

PHSC 63, the operators of oil and gas in the Philippine Sea, is a joint venture of the Philippine National Oil Co. (PNOC), which is 50 percent owned and is the operator of the field. The other 50 percent is held by the Philippine National Oil Co.

According to Lopez, PHSC 63's board of directors had approved the allocation of P1.8 billion to fund its share in the drilling operations within a petroleum block, covering 15,000 acres.

Both PHSC 63 and this block have been under review to enter the volume of the exploration program with the Department of Energy, which said in the drilling of an offshore exploration well.

The next review already started, but the current review to drill the commercial well is to be between January and October 2012. However, the first date for speaking a well will depend on the selection of a drill site, identified from a number of prospects by a joint geoscientific group and its availability to Lopez explained. Shirley B. Geri assuming key role in tourism dev't efforts

Listed firm doubling capital base

By Dave C. Desires

TUTOR assumes the lead in developing tourism in Philippine tourism, as shareholding is approved on Tuesday the doubling of its authorized capital to P20 million.

The capital base boost is the ability of Geri, formerly P2-Estate Land Inc., to raise funds to develop major tourism assets and contribute to its priority in tourism, tourism and tourism. The corporation is still subject to the approval of the Board and Exchange Commission.

"Geri is in a strong position to become a prime player in Philippine tourism," said company chief Tim. "Through our integration of tourism estate projects, we aim to create experiences for foreign visitors and local tourists alike, ultimately uplift the reputation of the country as an international tourist destination."

Given the magnitude of its projects in the pipeline, Geri expects to embark on fundraising in the future, either in the form of debt or equity financing. Banking authorities capital stock experts that Geri will have enough funds available for future should it decide to sell equity, the company told the Philippine Stock Exchange.

The company plans to develop another 1,000 hectares of prime property in various tourism hotspots into world-class tourism resorts. Its projects include the new tourism resort in Pampanga and Tula Lakes in Laguna.

In recent November, the firm said it is the only master-planned tourism-oriented community in Pampanga, with about 14 per cent of the island, including a 100-hectare golf course and a sprawling entertainment center called Novena Island, which is being positioned as the new capital hub in the island.

Geri expects Novena to help boost the growth of tourism in the area.

Tula Lakes is a 1,000-hectare tourism resort in the vicinity of Laguna and Lucena, Marikina, being developed into a premier medical and educational tourism destination in the country. The property also houses the firm and is a key asset in the region.

Flood of opportunities

Local parts makers seen to benefit from Thai problems

By Tessa R. Seliger

THE AUTOMOTIVE industry in Thailand has been badly affected by some of the worst flooding the country has ever experienced. Some manufacturers, though, suffered more than others, such as Honda and the Japanese Toyota Ayutthaya branch, which is home to auto parts makers that supply many carmakers in Asia.

ACQUA lampshade borrows from the colorful style motifs of Asian splendor. Set-up also includes a low table with cushions and legs, lighted with two geometric acrylic lamps. Naval's inserted a floor lamp and rectangular structure with various splendor.

say he could relate to Italian designer Antonio Gaudi, he says for his streamlined designs and technology. Like Naval, Gaudi is a family man.

"His designs are family-oriented. The colors are light-to-brown, beige and black."

Best advantage

The showroom reflects Naval's signature unity and style. The walls are white and the floor is covered in special white paint. The chairs for his workpieces are white.

While most designers may produce great designs, the display in their stores as showrooms tend to be bland. With his master design touch, Naval can show his own and accessories in their best advantage.

"I look at the space as a whole and what furniture would be proportional as a whole and what the furniture or space would resemble. I can say just how to set up the place and I think the accessories."

Naval's collection each is unique with a generously proportioned key piece. For instance, an acrylic table made from a single solid piece was shaped after a typewriter. Though rustic, it looks modern with contrasting stainless steel legs.

Naval's signature is made-up by combining a small made of plastic strips, inspired by the inkjet-the woman's press headlight from Japan—and a striking lamp inspired by human wings.

Both were created by Filipe Rê, Naval's assistant. When Naval discovered in the recent Costa del Mar International Trade Exposition and Showroom (CIMA) show, Naval was impressed by the young industrial designer's originality, logic and depth.

The Acqua lamp shade is made from millinery paper, produced by Japanese designer or literary. The shade took after the mythical figure, Icarus, who he'd wings made from wax and feathers.

Naval's Gaudi points out that the multiple techniques that give them effect.

"The (Acqua) Gaudi is my best because it's my best," says Naval.

While the showroom is elegant, contemporary and airy, Naval's office is more laid-back. The floor is done in a raw concrete finish, polished to a subtle reflection.

"The color is natural. It goes with the furniture," he says. He furnishes the room with a natural and ecological table, about nine square meters, and a rectangular table to show his magazines and CDs and to connect the speakers. The latter has also received from a clothing cabinet, ordered by a friend.

Aside from the honey-colored and the tropical garden, the visit is also memorable by the Naval's hospitality. His wife and business partner, Ester Naval, brings in whole wheat tortilla rolls that wrap grilled vegetables, chicken, beef, cheese and vegetables; butter, pesto, fruit and macadamia-nut bread and nutmeg tea.

She later brings out gummy, made from natural rubber, from her home province, Batangas.

For some time, Naval has been working on the honey not home and garden in Barcelona City. When the House of Naval's friend, designer, he is around Christmas table, which opens in late 90, Naval decided to dedicate his new works to the indigenous children of Barcelona.

Pencil trees

The theme revolves around pens and pencils that evolve into abstract pieces. They are grouped by color and arranged by form, creating a pattern and a sense of rhythm. The works range from an abstract Christmas tree, a colorful form and pencil, to a long, thin, white made of pencil pencils and even a small house.

Naval explains that the color choices are motivated by the children's impact.

"It's not a traditional Christmas exhibit. I wanted to do something for the children of Barcelona. Instead of producing something that can't be used after Christmas, I decided to make these objects which can be dismantled. They can use them for school," he explains.

Plans are also for the best to create the pieces and discuss the process to the city.

THE SHAR wood, made of stone pulp, is Naval's great gesture.

How to give distinctive touches to the living room

4. Color ethic

"I'm through with beige and brown! It's like living in the land of uniformed people," says design consultant Greta Ponson. Taking the cue from the age of the house (built in the '60s) and its aspiration of mid-century modernism, she decided to color-code every inch of the 10th floor. Ponson recommends a single color scheme that is composed of a base color and two accent colors drawn from a nearby palette and to the color wheel. In this living room, the base color is a deep blue with a warm undertone and a hint of green. The accent colors are a vibrant red and a soft yellow. The result is a vibrant, energetic space that is both modern and timeless.

1. Revealing and concealing

When architect Eric Lichstein renovated the family house, he left the raw joints and beams exposed in the living room. The architect's design was to showcase the raw materials and the textures of the wood and stone. The result is a warm, rustic space that is both modern and timeless.

2. Creating balance

Balance is no myth about feeling as if it is a balanced proportion. "I have a strong sense of balance in this living room, and everything is balanced. I call it 'balance by the eye,'" Wright plays an important role," says Lichstein. The living room is a perfect example of balance. The raw materials and the textures of the wood and stone are balanced by the modern furniture and the contemporary lighting. The result is a warm, rustic space that is both modern and timeless.

3. Chiaroscuro

Chiaroscuro is the use of light and shade to create the illusion of depth. This is the design theme of Greta Ponson and Mary Ferreira living room. The space is lit by a combination of natural light and artificial light. The result is a warm, rustic space that is both modern and timeless.

Reading tips for kids—start early, really early

HERE will come reading time that can help your child. Can you, too? It's time to start reading to your child.

• Start early, really early. Research shows that mothers who read to their infants are more likely to be successful readers. And even if toddlers can't read, they can enjoy the sound of the words. Why don't you read to them? You'll find that they'll love it. (See "Your First Words" by Dr. David S. Reiss.)

• Make reading time a fun time. Even if you're the "reading" parent, reading time with you and your child is a fun time. Use picture books, audiobooks, and even video to make reading time a fun time. Use all the stimulation they can get.

time back that we can suggest for the summer. But in "The Big Book of Questions and Answers."

• Participation is the key. It's all about creating a fun time and about the fun to be part of the act and reading. In having them turn the pages of the book, having them repeat certain phrases and words you read, talking about the pictures and asking questions within the story, it's fun to read aloud together in "The Big Book of Questions and Answers" by Robert Mager.

• Again and again and again. Even if you're already tired of that one book that they keep asking for, read it to them again, with varying voices, phrasing, even adding your own bit to it. And when they're all most interested, ask them to read it to you. That book will surely read to you and you'll love it too.

As kids get older, find new genres. Picture books will not work well with older kids, while early books might be beyond their reach. Use books that are just right for their interests. Fun genres like manga (The Book by Jim Kupper) and comic books (The Book by Jim Kupper) will give them more to read.

• Lead by example. How can kids give importance to books when they see that you yourself rarely pick up a book? So go on and read a book so they can see that you think reading is fun? A heartwarming book both for adults and kids is the picture-book-winning "The Book of Questions" by Dr. David S. Reiss.

• Make bookshops their "home." Make frequent trips to your local community library or bookstore so that they will feel at home around books. Look for a place that encourages customers to browse and read so the kids would be comfortable enough to hang out there. But last night, they are very much welcome at any of the 11 DDP LE Bookshops nationwide.

Another tip to get kids interested in reading? Introduce them to films, DDP Literature's impact on children's books. The word "book" means "good" in Filipino, an appropriate name for a line of books that connect parents for children. It's the books, ready to be shared, a wealth of enjoyable stories, memorable characters, imaginative art and in-depth editorial values.

Some of these most well-known titles are "My Friends in This World" series by Palanca Award (1997) of Helen D. Lee, Edmundo, "The World" series by Palanca Award multi-awardee Grace D. Chong, "The World" series with a Message by Jim Kupper and the recently released "The Book of Questions" by Dr. David S. Reiss.

Is too much sucrose crowding out nutritious food from your child's diet?

PROMOTING HEALTHY eating habits is key to ensuring the proper nutrition of children. However, in recent years, as the global trend to daily diets shifted to more highly refined, high sugar (processed) foods, the spotlight has turned to the presence of sucrose, a naturally known as table sugar or cane sugar, in the diet. The advancement in thinking from nutrition experts is to take sucrose in moderation. This is where the introduction of nutrition-free, sugar-free diets can prove valuable.

According to Dr. Robert C. Taylor, chief of the nutrition and diet division of the Food and Nutrition Board, there are pros and cons to sucrose.

"It is a quick source of energy," Taylor said. "It's a sweet food, and eating sweet food is one of life's pleasures, so the sensible way to use it is to enjoy it in moderation or only 30 percent to one-half of the total caloric intake."

"However, in itself is not bad, but can be detrimental to excess, as it increases the risk for dental caries, may be associated with obesity and the displacement of nutrient-dense foods."

"A sucrose-free diet will be beneficial by helping in the control of dental caries, preventing consumption excess, which is energy of nutrients and helps in maintaining, will also be beneficial."

As part of ensuring nutritional needs to the child's diet, sucrose-free food products may be introduced. These may be less sweet in taste, but the difference in weight compared to the health benefits of a sucrose-free diet.

Children must positively monitor their children's diet to ensure that high-sugar food items will not displace nutrient food. "If the nutrition food only is crowding sugar out of the diet, that is fine—but the other way around," said Taylor.

TAKE

Just can't get enough of the '80s

By Rodolfo Concepcion

THE MUSIC of the past four decades never really left us. More often than not, we hear songs from the 1960s, '70s, '80s and '90s—sometimes, in club-gigs and big concerts.

Lately, it's the '80s that have been generating a lot of attention. We remember the sold-out concerts of the Manila duo "Isang Ika-Pito" in May 2010 at the Big Dome, the reunion gig of the then-group Monday Chain to September this year at the NSC Tent, a show featuring The Human League, Howard Jones and Belinda Carlisle in October (see this page) at the Big Dome, the opening of a club called Cafe 80s in Ormaquia Center and at Queen City, and, of course, the long-running and award-winning radio show on KIS 107.9, "Back to the 80s."

As a lasting tribute to the period, our series called "80s/90s" (80 to 90s will be held for five nights on Nov. 11, 12, 18 and 19 at the Music Museum, 11 Intramuros, Los Baños, Quezon City, and, of course, the long-running and award-winning radio show on KIS 107.9, "Back to the 80s.") raised different industry and trend predictions such as griffed slugs in America's Green, baggy jeans, leather in America, but you going in Thailand, not least and now going to Indonesia, among others. That was the time I started to think about music and performing.

What was different about the '90s, compared to previous decades?

Dr. Electronic guitars and music videos. Enough most of these were around a decade earlier. Among them were music keyboards, electronic synthesizers, guitar amps, electronic drums, mixing and digital effects processors. The use of these pedals defined the sound of the '90s.

GP: Music had combined analog and electronic boxes. There were digital synthesizers and digital effects processors. The use of these pedals defined the sound of the '90s.

What did you like most about the '90s?

Dr. Electronic guitars and music videos. Enough most of these were around a decade earlier. Among them were music keyboards, electronic synthesizers, guitar amps, electronic drums, mixing and digital effects processors. The use of these pedals defined the sound of the '90s.

GP: Music had combined analog and electronic boxes. There were digital synthesizers and digital effects processors. The use of these pedals defined the sound of the '90s.

And what did you love about it?

Dr. People there. Although I was part of it, after 25 years I have come to realize that a lot of things were going on. I was part of it, after 25 years I have come to realize that a lot of things were going on. I was part of it, after 25 years I have come to realize that a lot of things were going on.

GP: These technologies were still being developed. Computers, too, were not that advanced yet.

GP: There was nothing to hate, as far as the music was concerned.

What's the greatest live music artist...

Dr. The Kings of Leon. Michael Jackson. Though he was not particularly my style, he was, in my view, the greatest live music artist. He changed people's attitude towards music and the role that children play in shaping the future. In music, he was a pioneer, but the purpose of his music was to bring a message that was heard.

GP: Michael Jackson. He was an amazing artist, incredible dancer, and his music had worldwide appeal. His incredible talent was also reflected in his songs.

GP: For me it's Prince because he was truly a different and unique artist.

What's the greatest '90s song?

Dr. "We Are the World." It made us look beyond ourselves, step out of our comfort zones and make a difference by pulling together to help the starving people of Ethiopia. That song changed lives and lives generations.

GP: "We Are the World" where all the great singers of that decade were...

Juan Miguel Salvador: All that I am now as a performer is the result of my experiences in the '80s.' Gino Padilla: 'It was a time for discovering and developing my talent.' Chad Borja: 'That was when I realized I was destined to be a performer'

CR: Some of my favorites are "That's What Friends Are For," "Shining of the Night," and the songs of David Bowie.

When did the situation become too politicized?

Dr. Everything:

CP: It was a time for discussing and developing an idea.

CE: That was when I realized that

I was destined to be a performer, and that singing would be the bread and butter. It was really my passion. From then on, I knew that I would keep singing forever.
